

NATIONAL DAY CELEBRATIONS AT DILMUN

Principal's Message

Dear Parents and Students,

Today is the last day of the school and we all will have winter holiday to enjoy.

This is the time of the family gathering and quality time with the friends. Dilmun School has clearly set goals for the future and we will be sharing all future strategies and plans with all parents during the second term. Today Dilmun students join country celebrations in admitting National Day.

The National Day of Bahrain is not just a holiday, but a symbol of the unity, solidarity, glorious past and promising future of all Bahrainis, wherever they live. The 16th of December is also an annual milestone for our country, when we reflect on the recent achievements and set new goals. For the leading role of the country in the region. The role of educational sector is very crucial in impacting the country with future leaders and individuals with clearly set goals towards country social and economic development. Our country as the first in the region emphasized the role of Bahraini women in active participation in country development. Bahraini women perform in various economical fields as successful business parties and also play important role in social support system, allowing citizens to achieve required progress in establishing stability. Today we live in a very complicated, unpredictable and challenging global environment, which requires much effort to successfully navigate in it and Bahrain is an ambassador of peace on international platform.

Dilmun School is very proud of its participation in educating well known figures for almost 40 years .Our graduates have been successfully performing in ministries, hospitals, banks and universities: We will continue doing our best to educate the students to the highest level possible.

On this occasion let me congratulate the Royal Family and Sh. Hamad Bin Isa Al Khalifa for securing positive country development and preparing bright future for our children. May the God bless Bahrain!!!

TIPS FOR PARENTS

The 4 Principles of Good Parenting

1. What you do matters. "This is one of the most important principles," Steinberg tells WebMD. "What you do makes a difference. Your kids are watching you. Don't just react on the spur of the moment. Ask yourself, 'What do I want to accomplish, and is this likely to produce that result?'"

2. You cannot be too loving. "It is simply not possible to spoil a child with love," he writes. "What we often think of as the product of spoiling a child is never the result of showing a child too much love. It is usually the consequence of giving a child things in place of love -- things like leniency, lowered expectations, or material possessions."

3. Be involved in your child's life. "Being an involved parent takes time and is hard work, and it often means rethinking and rearranging your priorities. It frequently means sacrificing what you want to do for what your child needs to do. Be there mentally as well as physically."

Being involved does not mean doing a child's homework -- or reading it over or correcting it. "Homework is a tool for teachers to know whether the child is learning or not," Steinberg tells WebMD. "If you do the homework, you're not letting the teacher know what the child is learning."

4. Adapt your parenting to fit your child. Keep pace with your child's development. Your child is growing up. Consider how age is affecting the child's behavior.

PTA CORNER

Partnerships between parents, educators and children work to enhance the child's success within as well as outside the walls of the school. We know that children learn more and have better lives when everyone in the school community works together to share thoughts and information; working together on projects to benefit all the children DILMUN. One of the most important organizations at DILMUN is the Parent Teachers Association (PTA).
